Jurisprudence

STEP 1: basis of comparison

1. Same business or economic sector

   …article 1102 [NAFTA] "invites an examination of whether a non-national investor complaining of less favorable treatment is in the same business sector or economic sector as the local investor..."  "PCB Waste"

   SD Myers v Canada

2. Same economic sector & activity

<tr>
<td>cigarettes: producers/resellers</td>
<td>Feldman v Mexico</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cotton commercialization: free market / fixed price governmental programs</td>
<td>Champion Trading v Egypt</td>

<tr>
<td>Package delivering: postal / courier</td>
<td>UPS v Canada * With dissent opinion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>steel producers: with respect to their potential use in a highway project</td>
<td>ADF v USA</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* With dissent opinion
STEP 1: basis of comparison

3. “Less like” but available comparators

“...It would be as perverse to ignore identical comparators if they were available and use comparators that were less like, as it would be perverse to refuse to find and apply less like comparators when no identical comparators exist”.
Methanol/Ethanol

“In like situations cannot be interpreted in the narrow sense advanced by Ecuador as the purpose is to protect investors as compared to local producers, and this cannot be done by addressing exclusively the sector in which that particular activity is undertaken”. Local producers/exporters of cigarettes

Methanex v USA

Occidental v Ecuador

STEP 2: less favorable treatment

- Damage must be
  - real, not hypothetical, and
  - verifiable

“The question may be raised whether the equality of treatment accorded by the Respondent to the Investor and to US steel manufacturers and steel fabricators was more apparent than real... evidence of discrimination, however, is required”.

ADF v USA

STEP 3: finding legitimate causes for differentiated treatment

“...the interpretation of the phrase like circumstances in Article 1102 must take into account... the legal context of the NAFTA, including both its concern with the environment and the need to avoid trade distortions that are not justified by environmental concerns. The assessment of like circumstances must also take into account circumstances that would justify governmental regulations that treat them differently in order to protect the public interest”.

SD Myers v Canada

“...it is clear that the concept of national treatment as embodied in NAFTA and similar arrangements is designed to prevent discrimination on the basis of nationality, or by reasons of nationality”.

Feldman v Mexico

STEP 3: Finding legitimate causes for differentiated treatment

“Differences in treatment will presumptively violate Article 1102(2), unless they have a reasonable nexus to rational government policies that: (i) do not distinguish, on their face or de facto, between foreign-owned and domestic companies, and (ii) do not otherwise unduly undermine the investment liberalizing objectives of NAFTA”.

Pope & Talbot v Canada

No equality when it comes to illegality!
Thunderbird v Mexico

Example

Sugar/High fructose corn syrup
ADM v Mexico
Sugar/High fructose corn syrup
CPI v Mexico
Other relevant elements

- Burden of proof:
  - The investor must establish at least a "prima facie" case
  - The burden then shifts to the State as to justify any legitimate ground for differentiated treatment

- Intent:
  - Highly important for evidence purposes
  - However, no need to prove a "subjective intent", as the "effect test" may be enough
  - But necessity of evidence on the negative effect remains

Conclusions

- The NT clause continues to be an essential element of BITs. Its purpose is to guarantee equality of competitive conditions, linked to material treatment
- Advisable to draft the standard in a precise manner
- When pre-establishment is granted, exceptions do provide an important degree of flexibility for governmental public policies
- When it comes to the standard application, there is an interesting jurisprudential pattern (3-Steps), mainly from the NAFTA

Conclusions

- However, there is an important degree of flexibility, especially for Step 1 (identifying the comparators)
- Of paramount importance:
  - to compare what it is reasonably comparable, and
  - safeguard measures and policies that do not discriminate by reason of nationality
